Judge says Bulger trial due to start Wednesday

Delay. Jury selection for the trial of alleged mob boss James "Whitey" Bulger is taking longer than expected. Pool probe. Lawyers for both sides are sifting through questionnaires of 700 people to find 18 jurors. Ready to roll. The process should finish Tuesday, with opening statements starting Wednesday. Jury selection delaying Bulger opening statements

'Whitey' trial. The judge in the Bulger trial pushed opening statements back to Wednesday as a panel of jurors is sought.

Narrowing down a group of more than 700 people to 18 fair and impartial jurors to decide the fate of alleged mob boss

James "Whitey" Bulger is taking longer than scheduled.

The attempt to find the best jurors in the case has pushed back the start of the trial, and a new schedule was outlined yesterday.

Both sides and the judge will review the jury questionnaires for the rest of this week. Jurors who are not excused because of the answers will be called back for in-person interviews on Monday. Both prosecutors and Bulger's lawyers will then on Issues unresolved

- Lawyers also argued over some unresolved issues, including whether some reporters on Bulger's witness list should be sequestered and if certain statements by federal prosecutors during other trials can be used.
- Casper did not rule on those issues as of press time.

Tuesday be able to challenge a limited number of the qualified jurors who don't fit into their strategies.

On Wednesday, prosecutors and Bulger's lawyer should be able to give their opening statements. This was originally scheduled for Monday, but Judge Denise Casper gave both sides more time to review jury questionnaires.

Hundreds more potential jurors filed into the federal courthouse in South Boston yesterday and were again introduced to the case. Casper gave the same instructions as she did to other jury groups on Tuesday, and again Bulger was introduced by his lawyer.

"Good morning," Bulger said while standing before the group and nodding. He added another "good morning" before sitting down again.

Hub students among those demonstrating in support of uprisings in Turkey

Dozens of protesters demonstrated outside the Turkish Consulate in Boston yesterday in a show of support and solidarity with protesters in their home country. Unprecedented anti-government demonstrations have for days been taking place across Turkey in response to a police crackdown and Prime Minister Tayyip Erdogan's Islamic policies. Vice President Joe Biden on Tuesday urged Turkey's government to respect the rights of its political opponents after a violent crackdown against the protesters raised concerns. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

A woman in her 30s was killed around 2:45 p.m. yesterday when she was struck by an Orange Line train at Stony Brook Station in Jamaica Plain.

It was not immediately clear whether the death was a suicide or an accident.

"We're still investigating facts and circumstances leading up to it," Transit Police Lt. Richard Sullivan said.

Down but not out. MBTA ridership down, while fare revenue increases

Ridership dropped by 1.9 percent since July, when fares increased by an average of 23 percent, recent data shows.

Despite steep dips of 3.5 percent this spring, fare revenue in March and April exceeded expectations and was up more than 20 percent.

The MBTA projects a surplus of $16.6 million in the fiscal year 2013 operating budget because the decline in ridership was less than the 5.5 percent analysts projected. MORGAN ROUSSEAU Development. The plans also call for an 850-space bicycle parking and storage facility.

Under a new proposal, the massive concrete Government Center Garage would be replaced with a six-building development with towers 45 and 48 stories tall.

HYM Investment Group submitted a project notification form yesterday to the Boston Redevelopment Authority concerning the 2,300-space Government Center Garage.

The buildings would include more than 700 housing units, a mix of condos and apartments, 200 hotel rooms, office and retail space.

A portion of the current garage, which is located at the Haymarket MBTA station, would be torn down. The Haymarket bus station would be reconfigured.

The project calls for a new plaza to reconnect the Rose Kennedy Greenway and the Bulfinch Triangle, the area around Portland and Canal streets. Plans include an 850-space bicycle parking and storage facility for residents and employees with showers and changing rooms, and 32,000 square feet of green roof and roof gar-

A U.S. Army sergeant accused of killing 16 Afghan civilians in cold blood last year pleaded guilty yesterday to premeditated murder and other charges under a deal with military prosecutors to avoid the death penalty.

Staff Sgt. Robert Bales, a decorated veteran of four combat tours in Iraq and Afghanistan, is accused of roaming off his Army post in the Afghan province of Kandahar in March 2012 and gunning down unarmed villagers, mostly women and children, in attacks on their family compounds.

Casualties mount in Philadelphia building collapse

Rescue. Crews worked overnight to free victims, said Fire Commissioner Lloyd Ayers.

A 35-year-old woman was confirmed killed and 13 people were injured in a building collapse in downtown Philadelphia yesterday.

Reports last night said at least two more bodies were recovered, but that information could not be confirmed by press time.

Rescue workers pulled people from mountains of crushed concrete and splintered wood, using search dogs to scour the rubble for others, fire officials said.

A four-story building under demolition collapsed onto a neighboring two-story Salvation Army Thrift Store at 2140 Market Street at 10:45 a.m., trapping people under debris, Fire Commissioner Lloyd Ayers said.

Those pulled from the rubble suffered minor injuries and were taken to area hospitals where they were in stable condition, he said.

One witness, Dan Gillis, 31, of Cinnaminson, N.J., a construction worker on a job across the street, said he saw a crane remove a supporting beam from the front of the building, and then the wall started swaying.

Another witness, Jeffrey Fehnel, 48, of Philadelphia, said about the same time a backhoe hit the rear side of the building.

"The building came down. It was like a big blast," Fehnel told Reuters.

Carlton Williams, commissioner of the Department of Licenses and Inspections for Philadelphia, said the site had all the permits needed for demolition. Officials said the cause was still under investigation. METRO, REUTERS

Security agency scraps plan to allow small knives on planes

The top U.S. transportation security official said yesterday that he had decided not to permit passengers to carry small knives on airplanes, after receiving a drumbeat of criticism from flight attendants and the public that easing restrictions would increase flight dangers.

Transportation Security Administration head John Pistole, who had proposed to loosen rules put in place in the wake of the September 11 hijackings, told Reuters he had decided to scrap the changes.

"After extensive engagement with the Aviation Security Advisory Committee, law enforcement officials, passenger advocates, and other important stakeholders, TSA will continue to enforce the current prohibited items list," Pistole said.

Genomics and particle physics — offering different perspectives on the fundamental nature of life and the cosmos — are the two hottest areas of scientific research.

Eight of the 21 most closely followed scientists in 2012 studied genes and their functions, while the single most-cited paper last year covered the hunt for the long-sought Higgs boson particle, according to a Thomson Reuters survey. It was the third year in a row in which genomics researchers topped the rankings.

"Genomics is a perennially hot topic, as we learn more about how [DNA] sequences play out in the manifestation of disease," said Christopher King, editor of Thomson Reuters ScienceWatch, which tracks trends in research.

The farmer claims the company is negligent, and that the incident puts U.S. wheat export sales at risk.

A U.S. wheat farmer has sued Monsanto Co., accusing the biotech seed giant of gross negligence for not containing an experimental, genetically modified wheat discovered in an Oregon field that has put U.S. wheat export sales at risk.

Farmer Ernest Barnes, who grows wheat in Morton County in the southwest corner of Kansas, filed suit this week in U.S. District Court in Wichita, Kan., alleging that he and other wheat farmers have been hurt financially by the discovery of the unapproved biotech wheat that Monsanto said it stopped testing and shelved nine years ago.

"Monsanto has released GE (genetically engineered) wheat into the non-genetically modified wheat population," the petition states.

Heat that should sizzle 'In the Heights' instead just a slow burn Review. Latest from SpeakEasy Stage is not as fiery as it should be.

The heat should be high at the Calderwood Pavilion now that "In the Heights" — a play that invokes both the jubilation and tension of summer in the inner city — has arrived. Unfortunately, the SpeakEasy Stage Company's production of the Tony Award-winning musical only warms intermittently.

Lin-Manuel Miranda's tale of life on one tiny corner of Manhattan's Washington Heights is rife with big, bold characters moving to a Latin beat as they desperately chase the American dream. The immigrants live with passion in a community that values hard work, culture and family above all else. But while the younger generation embraces their heritage, they don't share the dreams-fulfilled sentiment of their elders, instead longing to escape and elevate their lives.

Ironically, this generational divide is apparent in the performances as well. The seasoned actors embody their characters completely, while the struggle that a number of fledgling actors (many of whom are Boston Conservatory students) undergo to portray their roles is evident in their fractured performances.

Veteran actress Carolyn Saxton is so convincing, and vocally impressive, as block matriarch Abuela Claudia that she immediately gains a soft spot in the audience's heart. Tony Castellanos and Nicole Paloma Sarro generate the production's most authentic passion as Kevin and Camila Rosario, while Merissa Haddad provides great comic relief as a local hairdresser, gossip and all-around spitfire.

Diego Klock-Perez (Usnavi) opens the show with a high-energy rap that sets the scene for the story, but his momentum flags in the second act, when his lyrics get lost in the music. Jorge Barranco (Sonny) also flounders during a blackout scene, but manages to rebound.

Vocally, though, the ensemble is spot-on. Unfortunately, it's not enough to bolster a show that should be impassioned from start to finish. Though Larry Sousa's extraordinary choreography is properly executed, it lacks the verve required to elevate the dancing from performance to celebration. The energy that should make "In the Heights" sizzle isn't there.

10 Films out right now

1 'The Internship'
Remember eight years ago when Owen Wilson and Vince Vaughn were in that movie everyone liked? Now they're doing it again, only it's a comedy about Google that makes fun of tech dorks. It's almost the same thing, yes?

2 'The Purge'
Ethan Hawke stars in this horror film in which a society — a very foolish one — thinks it can put a damper on crime by making it legal one night a year. Whatever, that's not remotely as scary as "Before Midnight."

3 'Before Midnight'
In a weekend overloaded with sequels, the most respectable is the second sequel to "Before Sunrise." Did Celine and Jesse (Julie Delpy and Ethan Hawke) stay together after "Before Sunset"? Do they have kids? Have they grown weary of each other? (Spoilers: Yes, yes

Owen Wilson and Vince Vaughn try to repeat "Wedding Crashers" with "The Internship." / PHIL BRAY

and maybe.)

4 'The Kings of Summer'
Everyone's favorite marrieds Nick Offerman and Megan Mullally play supporting roles in this high school comedy about bros who run away from home and live in a dilapidated house in the woods.

5 'Wish You Were Here'
Joel Edgerton, currently onscreen as Tom in "The Great Gatsby," returns to his native Australia for this drama about four friends who go on a South-East Asian holiday. Only three return, but no one seems to know what happened to the fourth.

6 'After Earth' Philadelphians Will Smith and M. Night Shyamalan finally team up for yet another postapocalyptic romp that is in no way similar to "Oblivion." Will Smith, who plays dad to real-life son Jaden, is a character named Cypher Raige. Seriously.

7 'Now You See Me'
Jesse Eisenberg, Mark Ruffalo, Michael Caine and — why not? — Morgan Freeman, too, are only a fraction of the large and overqualified cast that fills out this caper thriller, in which magicians steal from the rich and give to their audiences.

8 'Frances Ha'
"Greenberg"'s Greta Gerwig and Noah Baumbach reteam sans Ben Stiller for this grainy, black-and-white, vaguely French New Wave-inspired lark about a 20-something (Gerwig) languishing in 20-something hell after her bestie (Mickey Summer) finds a man.

9 'Deceptive Practice: The Mysteries and Mentors of Ricky Jay'
Both a magician and an always charming presence in movies ("Boogie Nights," "Heist," etc.), the esteemable Ricky Jay gets his own "great man" documentary — because he deserves it.

10 'Fast & Furious 6'
Vin Diesel and Paul Walker's speed demons team up with Dwayne Johnson's federal agent to infiltrate ... oh, who cares what it's about? All that matters is there's a chase scene with a freakin' tank.

Creepy, desperate stranger isn't a good look. Whether you are interested in meeting friends or flirting your way to a good relationship, it can be difficult to forge connections with interesting people. Think of it this way: If an unknown person came to your front door and started a conversation with you, you'd wonder, "What do they want? Why are they talking to me?" It's the same when picking up a stranger. Barging in with little purpose — other than getting into their underwear — can feel awkward or make you look like a jerk. You can do better than that. The propagation of the human race depends on it. Here's how to rope someone into a conversation, friendship or your bed.

DON'T do it by yourself. Invite the hot stranger and their partner (or friends!) to join you and your partner (or friends!) for drinks, a comedy show or dinner. Triads and quads keep things light and provide a higher number of possible conversation combinations and permutations. It's the platonic version of threesomes and swinging.

Don't be a creeper — make sure you approach a new person with an interesting, unique reason. / GETTY IMAGES

At the same time, DON'T be afraid to be alone. It's okay to fly solo at public lectures, gyms, art gallery openings, author readings at your favorite bookstore and city-sponsored cultural events. Going solo means you'll grow more comfortable with independence — a necessity for all healthy interpersonal relationships. You'll also meet other singles with shared interests.

DO put your typing fingers to work to get creative in breaking the ice. Dating sites aren't only the tip of the iceberg, they're also melting. Seriously, who doesn't have an Internet dating horror story? Try MeetUp.com or Discover-Outdoors.com. Google local film societies and social sports clubs. Make the earth below you your common ground; the hiking trip, movie or soccer game provides great conversation fodder. Remember: It's easiest to connect when you have a connector. For example, instead of rushing out when credits roll, casually mention to the person seated near you, "God, wasn't the end of that film awful? I love this director's work, and she's usually much better with closing films."

Do your research

You may already have potential targets among friends of friends. Ask around. Chances are that those you love and respect are in touch with like-minded souls. Tell everyone you want to meet someone new and suggest they recommend others who might be good matches for you. Have the friend introduce you or make direct contact.

Type 1 Diabetes?

Up to 70% of people with diabetes develop nerve damage.

Diabetes nerve damage can affect the legs, feet, or hands, causing numbness or loss of sensation. But since this nerve damage comes on gradually, many do not even realize they have a problem - until it leads to more serious complications.

Doctors at the Translational Pain Research Group at Brigham and Women's Hospital are conducting a research study of an investigational medication that may help reduce nerve damage for people with type 1 diabetes. If you choose to participate, you will receive a no cost, non-invasive test to help determine if you have early signs of diabetes nerve damage. You will also be compensated for time and travel.

DRINKONE (OR 10) FOR BOSTON

If you're looking for an outlet for those charitable impulses, sometimes it's best to stick with what you know. That was the thinking of DrinkOne, a group of Boston restaurant industry members who came together after the Marathon Bombings to throw a series of events to raise money for the victims. The culmination of their efforts takes place tonight at The Sinclair. One organizer, Kirsten Amann, explains: "The Boston restaurant industry is small. That's the one thing we know how to do: bartend and make a good cocktail."

"Drinking for a cause is LUPEC's deal," she says. LUPEC, the cocktail-focused group of which she's also a member, regularly holds charitable events like this. Joining them in organizing the DrinkOne event is United States Bartender Guild of Boston and OnTheBar, a bartender-focused app. Over the course of the last month many bars throughout the city have featured a DrinkOne cocktail on their menu, proceeds of which go to charity. The USBG, as a non-profit, administers the funds, some of which will go specifically to industry members affected by the bombings.

So many bars were rushing to plan events after the tragedy, Amann explains, that "We thought, 'Ok, this is great, but why not just do something all together instead of competing for the same money?'"

Tonight's party, kicking off at 7 p.m., will feature five cocktails ($5 each), food donated from local food trucks and burlesque performances by the Boston Babydolls. There will be both a $20 and $40 ticket option, the latter of which grants access to a raffle. That money will also go to their charitable contribution.

"None of us get to donate like 10 thousand dollars," Amann says. "But if we all work together we're going to be able to put together a pretty sizable donation." And after this party, they might also earn a sizable hangover.

Fair warning: This will probably make you feel old. Counting Crows' debut album, "August and Everything After," was released 20 years ago. Crazy, right? The anniversary has also snuck up on Counting Crows frontman Adam Duritz, who says there are no plans to cash in on the milestone. Instead, the band is looking forward and embarking on a summer tour across the U.S. with fellow '90s stalwarts the Wallflowers.

I can't believe it's been 20 years since "August and Everything After" came out.

For me it doesn't really seem like that either. I would probably not think about it being 20 years at all except that people keep saying it to me. I don't really look at it any differently than I do the other albums. It happened to sell a lot more, but that didn't have much to do with me. The job that we were going to do on the album was done long before anybody bought 10 million copies of it.

What sticks out in your memory of making that album?

It was a difficult album to make. It's sort of where I took over the band, and because I was very lame at being a band-leader back then, that made it really hard on the other guys — because I didn't take over the band in the best way, and that made life really hard on everyone while we were making that record. Since then we've done a lot of years on buses and a lot of tours and made a lot of records I really love.

Any plans to celebrate the anniversary?

I'm waiting for something more significant, some sort of trumpet fanfare to make me realize it's been 20 years since that record came out. That really hasn't happened, possibly partially because we didn't do anything to mark it. We did a deluxe album years ago and we did the live album, which was just all of "August and Everything After" played live, a couple of years ago, so there isn't really anything left to do other than make another 20-year release to get people's money for it. But we're not going to do that.

You guys were early adopters in using social media to connect with your fans.

I remember right when I moved to Los Angeles after we finished touring on "August and Everything After" — like 1995 — I realized at some point in there that AOL had forums for all these different bands, like message boards, and there were people on there on the Counting Crows board just talking about our music. So I went on it and told people who I was — it took a little while to convince people — and my thought was, "Here's a way to talk directly to your fan base. You don't have to go through radio, you don't have to go through print." I mean, all of those are useful, but it's kind of useful to be able to go yourself, too. I mean, it was social media in a way before there was social media. It never hurts to be able to go directly to people. It's necessary now, especially if you're going to be independent.

'It's fun to steal things'

You've been pretty independent for a while. Considering the landscape of the music industry, could you ever see yourself going back to a big label?

I want to work with people who simply have a good business model, and the record companies' business model is not particularly good. They still can only think about selling things through radio and making really expensive videos and that's about it. Those things are all great, but there's more to it than that. And also, they want to give you 10 percent and take 90, which I'm sorry, but that just doesn't seem smart to me, especially nowadays when a lot of people are buying something that doesn't actually exist in three-dimensional form. I know that they don't have a lot of distribution costs making an mp3. I could make them myself. Because the first experience with the Internet for a lot of the record companies was Napster, the reaction was to try and lock all the doors after that, just in sheer terror keep everybody out. I don't think you can do anything about downloads. People are going to do what they can do. It's a shame people don't have a little more decency, but that's life. You know, whatever, it's fun to steal things, I guess.

Coeur de Pirate, French for "The Pirate Heart," is the alias of French-Canadian singer/songwriter Beatrice Martin. In 2008, she released her first, eponymous album, which was minimal and piano-based. But "Blonde," her 2011 second album, brought in the Phil Spector-style Wall of Sound, infinitely enhancing her already pristine songwriting, which fuses the French chanson tradition with contemporary indie pop in a way that takes both into new territory. You might want to bone up on your Rosetta Stone before going to this show tonight though, because this bilingual songbird sings in her native tongue quite a bit. But in any language, the music is lovely.

Coeur de Pirate is at the Paradise tonight.

'Hey Bartender' — what do I drink?

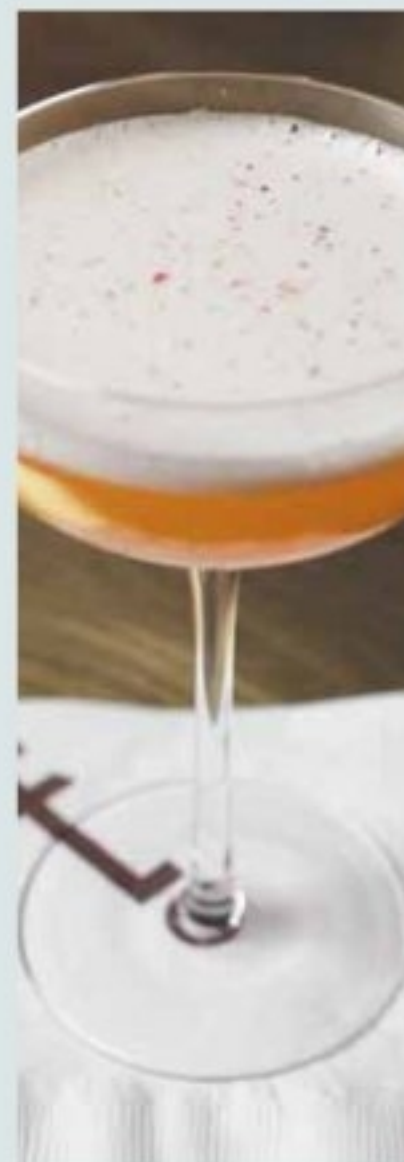

Drinks. A new film chronicles the world's best mixologists. They tell us what to order when we visit them.

Many bar fights could be started over the best bartender this city has to offer, but the ones profiled in "Hey Bartender" are the creme de la creme de menthe. This new film is a behind-the-scenes look at what it takes to be a cocktail connoisseur, with commentary from those who would know, like nightlife impresario Amy Sacco. We asked two of the film's stars to tell us about the drinks that they recommend for you.

— "Hey Bartender" opens Friday at Village East Cinema (181-189 Second Ave., 212-529-6799) and is available OnDemand.

Third annual Passing the Mic featuring Bad Rabbits

Friday, 7 p.m.

Berklee Performance Center, 136 Mass. Ave., Boston, Free; tickets required, www.bit.ly/1aWUelx

The third annual "Passing the Mic" to benefit the Boys & Girls Club of Greater Boston has added some star power to the mix this year. Recent Boston Calling artist and local darlings, funk outfit Bad Rabbits will perform live alongside kids from the Blue Hills Boys & Girls Studio Heat Music Clubhouse program. Sponsored by Converse and the Music & Youth Initiative, the community benefit show aims to demonstrate the power of hip-hop to create and further positive social change. The show is free, but reservations are required, so don't forget to get your tickets and come out and support the kids.

This show is ImprovBoston's parody of "Downton Abbey." The cast will take random suggestions from the audience and integrate them into an especially ridiculous faux episode of the British period drama. Who will die? Who else will die? Whose heart will be shattered to pieces? And which of the maids will be asked sweep up those pieces?

This annual event is typically known as the "Gay Pride Parade," but the word "gay" isn't comprehensive enough to convey the innumerable non-heteronormative identities represented here. Of course at its heart the whole "pride" thing isn't really about gender or sexuality, but about embracing everyone's freedom to be themselves. In fact, Boston Pride's mission statement doesn't even mention sexuality — just diversity.

Margaret Swan's side of this exhibition, "Layers of Time," features objects that mimic natural rock formations shaped over millennia. Andy Zimmerman's side, "DAY," utilizes a technique called "anamorphic distortion" to coax the viewer into a sense of the relativity of perception. Depending on where you stand inside the main piece, "TeleView," the images it contains are differently distorted.

This new musical by Brittany Bullen takes its inspiration from true stories of homeless women struggling to survive in a world that often doesn't seem to even notice they exist. A downer of a summer play? Not really, because the ultimate message here is one of hope, hope that help can be found, even when resources are scarce — and that's no downer. Union Square biergarten is a family affair Nosh. Bronwyn serves up German fare and bier with heart.

Bronwyn, the new German restaurant and biergarten in Union Square, actually has a Welsh name. It's named after chef Tim Wiechmann's wife and business partner who, as general manager, hoofed their Huron Village eatery T.W. Food, and earned the right to lend her namesake to their new venture.

Bronwyn's menu reflects a marriage between the recent butchery trend and the home cooking of Tim's ancestral Germany. Bronwyn's heritage includes some German, but her mom was inspired by classic literary heroines and named her for the fabled Celtic goddess of

Get your just desserts

Generally, German chocolate cake is an oversweet American concoction highlighted by coconut, so perhaps the name on Bronwyn's dessert list is ironic. Because this German chocolate cake is dense, more like a Viennese torte, but with a sponge that's as much cocoa as it is flour (we think) and seems to magically intertwine ganache into the sponge.

pretzels and Riesling-flavored sauerkraut.

Two pervasive elements wind through Bronwyn's dishes. Smoke: soft-shell crab with braised chestnuts has deep, sooty flavor; pierogies come stuffed with aromatic, lightly smoked kale. And mustard seed: biernudeln, a flat beer flavored noodle, is bathed in a creamy blue cheese and whole seed mustard sauce. All are excellent paired with a cold stein from their extensive bier list.

Bronwyn admits that the couple is, happily, very busy right now. "The restaurants are our children, so it's fine. But we do enjoy our days off."

Turn's out, there's no need to weave your way through the congested, touristy streets of the North End like a life-sized game of Tetris every time you want a solid plate of authentic Italian food. Nothing against our beloved Hanover Street, but take a tip from your Newton neighbors and break out of the city proper for a second: Fiorella's in Newtonville is your new go-to for Neapolitan-style wood-fired pizza, fresh linguini and clams, and all the vino you can muster. Even better? They've got a patio, a must for the upcoming months, when survival means shade and sangria. Horoscope

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20.

You're in an exceptionally good achievement cycle, but your victories could come about in a surprising way. It'll be a last-minute change that does the trick.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22.

A friend might lean on you in hopes that your capability will rub off. Do your best to help this person — you'll need similar assistance in the near future.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22.

An opportunity to make more money from a work-related matter is yours for the taking. You may need to modify it somewhat, but it should be easy.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22.

Profit from past experience and don't fall into a trap that has snared you before. Old mistakes don't have to be repeated.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22.

You are likely to fare better in a joint endeavor than a solo effort. Pick your ally wisely, and you'll do quite well.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21.

Because you're as much of a giver as you are a taker, you'll be in high demand. Your good attitude will be a boon to your team.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec.

♑ 21. To feel gratified, you'll need to engage in an activity that produces real benefits for you and others. Start the ball rolling quickly.

♒ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan 20.

You'll instinctively know how to arouse interest in your wares, making you a good salesperson. You'll need to be careful when it comes to actually handling money, however.

♓ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18.

One of your greatest assets is a desire to do things for others that they can't do themselves. If you utilize this wonderful gift, you will generate a plethora of good will.

♈ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20.

Mental tasks will be much easier than work requiring physical effort. If there is some type of heavy lifting on the agenda, hire helpers.

♉ Aries | March 21-April 20.

You'll have some very good chances to add to your material resources if you assert yourself. Don't be afraid to make extra funds by doing something new.

♊ Taurus | April 21-May 21.

If you're permitted to use your own ideas at work, you'll stand a much greater chance of success. Do what you can on your own, and don't be thwarted by outside forces.

There's a place for sex, and it isn't a newspaper

Re: 'Don't like it, don't read it' (Metro, June 5) Letter writer Charles Rose's letter verbally chastised a previous letter writer who said Metro's sex issue was "immoral," but Mr. Rose was as vague in his counter-opinion. Just what is the "right" way to embrace creation and sex? Is your one-size-fits-all idea some kind of absolute? I think Metro should keep out of the sex biz because there is too much of it in magazines, TV, etc. It contributes to sexist culture and the objectification of women and has its part in making human trafficking profitable. We

GMOs should be labeled

Re: 'What you should really know about GMOs' (Metro, June 5) I want to thank Metro's Meredith Engel for taking the time to write such an informative article on GMOs. I believe it is important to shed light on this topic to help people understand why GMO labeling is important. Our health is being put in jeopardy, and we are unaware of why it's happening. Thank you, Metro, for publishing articles that are important to everyone, even if they don't know it. I hope to see more articles like this in the future.

B's slam door in 2 OTs

NHL playoffs. The Bruins beat the Penguins 2-1 this morning thanks to more dramatics by Patrice Bergeron.

Patrice Bergeron was once again the hero, tipping in a Brad Marchand pass to give the B's a 2-1 victory in the second overtime and a dominant 3-0 series lead over the Penguins in the Eastern Conference Finals.

The first overtime was particularly fierce as Matt Cooke and Milan Lucic got into a heated tussle along the boards following a shot on goal by the Pens to start the extra session. Both received roughing minors.

Nathan Horton had a breakaway off a turnover moments later but Tomas Vokoun made his best save of the series, stuffing Horton's attempt with his left pad. Horton also hit the post with a would-be game-winner in the extra session.

Chris Kelly was called for tripping eight and a half minutes into OT, setting up a crucial Pittsburgh power play but the Pens only got one shot on goal. Similarly, the B's couldn't take advantage of Brooks Orpik being put in the box minutes later for high-sticking Brad Marchand. An Evgeni Malkin delay of game set up another B's power play with under two minutes to go in the OT, but Boston couldn't punch it in.

The Penguins had outplayed the Bruins throughout regulation, leading in most major categories. They had 39 shots on goal, compared with Boston's 25. They had 31 hits compared with the Bruins' 22. Most impressively for Pittsburgh, it led the faceoffs battle 37-19 through three.

Boston had a power play opportunity 12:24 into the third period as Pascal Dupuis was caught for interference on Johnny Boychuk, but the suddenly steady Pens easily killed it.

Chris Kunitz finally broke through for Pittsburgh 8:51 into the second, elevating the puck past Rask after assists by Paul Martin and Dupuis. The B's lone regulation tally came when David Krejci scored on a bank shot just 1:42 into the contest. It was Krejci's ninth goal of the postseason and Lucic was credited with the assist.

Talent is there for the taking for Sox tonight

Red Sox. A dismal 2012 season finally pays off tonight for the ballclub as it has the seventh overall pick.

The Red Sox will do something they haven't done since 1993 this evening — pick inside the top 10 of the MLB first-year player draft.

The Red Sox have the No. 7 overall pick, which can be credited to their disastrous 69-win season last year. The last time the Sox had a pick that high was in 1993, when they selected Trot Nixon. This is entirely new territory for the Sox as they've only had one pick inside the top 20 (No. 19 in 2011) since 2003. The organization is very excited about the opportunity to grab an elite young player.

"Yeah, as everyone knows there are no guarantees in the draft and good players come from all parts of the draft, but if you look at it historically the odds of getting a really good player (early) are higher than they would be," Red Sox general manager Ben Cherington said.

Cherington along with Amiel Sawdaye, director of amateur scouting, work extensively together throughout the draft process.

Although Cherington has the final say, Sawdaye plays a significant role in the pick.

This is their second draft together, and Sawdaye's fourth in his current role. His past selections could give some hints as to what kind of player the organization could be targeting with their top pick.

The Red Sox have never selected a high school player with their first pick in Sawdaye's drafts, and of the five first rounders overall, just one was a high school player (catcher Blake Swihart in 2011). Going by the past Sox trends, and with roughly 50 percent of top 10 MLB picks coming from college in the past five years, it's likely the player the team selects is a current collegiate player.

Although baseball is the most unpredictable sport to hazard a guess as to how players will pan out once they become professionals, there have been a number of quality players selected at No. 7.

Young pitching stud Matt Harvey of the Mets was selected at this spot in 2010, as well as Dodgers ace Clayton Kershaw back in 2006. Other players include Troy Tulowitzki (2005) and Nick Markakis (2003).

"We take players we like, that is the way we like to do it," Sawdaye said. "Even later in the draft we're pulling names of guys we like and guys we've seen. Typically you get a lot of those guys."

Jackie Bradley Jr. was the 40th overall pick in 2011, Ryan Lavarney was their sixth round pick in 2008, Will Middlebrooks was taken in the fifth round in 2007, Jacoby Ellsbury No. 23 overall in 2005, Dustin Pedroia in the second round of 2003, and Jon Lester in the second round of 2002.

The first round of the draft begins tonight (7, MLB Network) and continues throughout the weekend with the remaining 39 rounds.

MLB

A-Rod again under the microscope

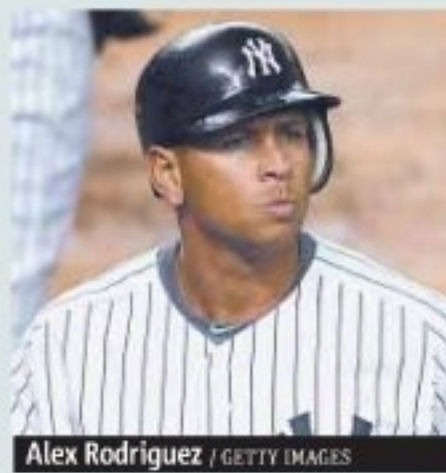

Few Yankees had any comment on the possible suspension of Alex Rodriguez following yesterday's win over Cleveland.

"I can't pinpoint something like that because I don't know what happened," Mariano Rivera said. "Besides that, I can't tell you anything that I don't know."

The news of the proposed suspensions broke during the early innings of the game, so the players had little, if any, knowledge of MLB seeking to suspend Rodriguez, Ryan Braun and others in connection to the Biogenesis scandal.

"I think we all had hoped that we had got through it but obviously we're not through it yet," New York manager Joe Girardi said Tuesday. "Our stance all along is that we'll let MLB handle it and we really have no comment."

MLBPA President Michael Weiner said yesterday morning the union was interviewing players involved in the matter and no suspensions would be meted out until after those were concluded.

"If you're going to want to find out stuff you're going to have to go through MLB," Girardi said prior to yesterday's day game against Cleveland.

On Monday, managing general partner Hal Steinbrenner conceded that at times Rodriguez has disappointed the Yankees. Now, Steinbrenner may have a new reason to be disappointed with Rodriguez, who is currently rehabbing a hip injury.

ESPN's T.J. Quinn broke the news that MLB will seek a 100-game suspension for Rodriguez's second PED offense.

Rodriguez was not suspended for his first offense, which occurred in 2009 when he admitted to using during his three seasons with the Rangers. LARRY FLEISHER
